

JOBS

+ New

Marketing Engineer

4 candidates

OPEN

E2E Test Job 1776465882

1 candidate

DRAFT

E2E Test Job 1776465721

DRAFT

CEO

6 candidates

OPEN

Robert Kane

robert.kane.test@yfs-test.internal

CEO

Completed

Submitted Apr 19, 2026

Download Report

Shortlist

Reject

← Back

Behavioural assessment summary

Analysis computed Apr 19, 2026

Re-analyse

ROLE-FIT READ

Likely mis-fit

OVERALL CONFIDENCE

Rich signal — converging concerning pattern

Four behavioural items scored with dimension signals largely converging, though interpersonal remains limited; conscientiousness and learning show moderate signal while honesty-humility contributes rich signal, producing an overall pattern with reasonable but uneven consistency across dimensions.

The pattern across this candidate's responses points to a recurring tendency to deflect accountability outward, paired with a gap between how they describe their own reliability and what their answers actually reflect — a combination that creates real risk in a role where owners look to the CEO to set the tone on both. For a mission-driven organization, the low weight placed on mission as a motivator compounds that concern.

This is a summary of observed signal against the hiring frame for this role. It is not a hire/no-hire recommendation — an interview is required to make that call.

PATTERNS AND CONCERNS

Self-report diverges on commitment and follow-through

Candidate agrees they "sometimes leave tasks unfinished when they lose interest" (C-CC1 = 4/5), but their forced-choice responses and behavioural evidence suggest the opposite. Worth probing with a specific example of a project they did not complete.

Referenced: Consistency check — commitment, Part 1 — A recent piece of work

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"You mentioned that you sometimes leave tasks unfinished when you lose interest — yet in the programme you described, you stayed in personally to salvage the situation. Can you give me a concrete example of something you genuinely walked away from before it was complete, and what made you decide to stop?"

Converging pattern on transparency and ownership

Multiple items point in the same direction: self-report of overstating work completeness (C-CC2 = 4/5), non-transparent scenario response (C-T2, option D), and externalised attribution of the mistake in the behavioural response. This is a serious warning pattern for any role requiring honest reporting. Probe explicitly in interview.

Referenced: Consistency check — transparency, Integrity scenario, Part 3 — A mistake you made

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"You mentioned making clear where the error originated and that it was frustrating to be caught out by other people's mistakes — can you take me back to the moment you found out the data was wrong and walk me through exactly what you said, to whom, and in what order?"

Consistent external attribution across behavioural items

In 2 of the behavioural items, the candidate attributed problems primarily to others or circumstances rather than acknowledging their own contributing decisions. Review the specific responses and consider whether this pattern would hold in the role.

Referenced: Part 1 — A recent piece of work, Part 3 — A mistake you made

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"When you described the inaccurate information incident, you said you made clear where the error originated — but I'm curious what role your own judgment played before that point: what led you to share that data without first verifying it yourself, and what would you do differently at that earlier stage?"

Behavioural responses consistently lack specificity

Across 3 behavioural items, the candidate gave abstract or generic descriptions rather than concrete, specific accounts. Could indicate weak self-reflection, low agency in the situations described, or a preparation issue. Probe with targeted "tell me exactly what you did next" questions.

Referenced: Part 1 — A recent piece of work, Part 3 — A mistake you made, Part 5 — Changing your mind

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"In the programme where the timeline slipped, you said you'd given clear direction and that execution was the problem — can you take me to a specific moment when you realised things were going wrong, what you actually said or did in that moment, and what the outcome looked like in concrete terms?"

Mission ranked low for a mission-driven leadership role

Candidate ranked mission 4 of 4 in the motivation trade-off. For a CEO role at a mission-driven organisation, this is worth probing — not disqualifying, but the interview should test whether genuine motivation aligns with the role.

Referenced: Motivation trade-off ranking

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"In the motivation trade-off, you ranked mission last of the four options. For a CEO role where the organization's purpose shapes nearly every major decision, that's worth understanding — what's your honest read on how much the mission itself would fuel you day-to-day, versus other aspects of the role?"

STRENGTHS

- ✓ In Part 5, the candidate's instinct to adjust communication rather than reconsider direction — "without fundamentally changing direction" — suggests openness to feedback stops short of genuine belief-updating, though forced-choice pairs show this tendency is not absolute.

OPEN QUESTIONS — SIGNAL GAPS

- Can you walk me through a specific moment when a project or plan fell apart under pressure — what you did in the first hour, and how you steadied yourself and the team before deciding next steps?

INTERVIEW FOCUS

1. "You mentioned that you sometimes leave tasks unfinished when you lose interest — yet in the programme you described, you stayed in personally to salvage the situation. Can you give me a concrete example of something you genuinely walked away from before it was complete, and what made you decide to stop?"
2. "You mentioned making clear where the error originated and that it was frustrating to be caught out by other people's mistakes — can you take me back to the moment you found out the data was wrong and walk me through exactly what you said, to whom, and in what order?"
3. "When you described the inaccurate information incident, you said you made clear where the error originated — but I'm curious what role your own judgment played before that point: what led you to share that data without first verifying it yourself, and what would you do differently at that earlier stage?"

Ranked by signal priority — high-severity flags first, then downgraded dimensions.

DIMENSION ESTIMATES

Learning Orientation

Moderate positive s

Composure

Insufficient signal ▼

Interpersonal Style

Limited signal ▼

Honesty & Humility

Concern ▼

Conscientiousness

Mixed signal ▼

FORCED-CHOICE PROFILE

Strongest preference toward Interpersonal Style and Learning Orientation. with Conscientiousness as a secondary signal. Lower or no signal on Honesty-Humility, Composure.

► Scoring detail — for auditing ▼

MOTIVATIONAL PRIORITIES

Scope and Autonomy rank highest. Mission ranks last of four.

For a mission-driven leadership role, mission ranking 4 of 4 is worth probing in interview.

INTEGRITY SCENARIO (C-T 2)

Option D: Share it tomorrow as planned and mention the flaw only if someone asks.

Honesty & Humility: -2

INTERPERSONAL STYLE PROFILE

DIRECTNESS

Unclear

CONFLICT APPROACH

Engages

REGARD FOR OTHERS

Respectful

FOLLOW-THROUGH

Absent

BEHAVIOURAL RESPONSES

C-S1 Think about a piece of work in the last 12 months mixed 516 chars ▼ that you were personally respo...

C-S2 Describe a time in the last year or two when mixed 489 chars ▼ you realized you had made a signifi...

C-S3 Describe a specific time when someone you limited signal 349 chars ▼ worked with pushed back on something y...

C-S4 Tell me about a time you had to deliver profile 380 chars ▼ feedback to someone — a peer, a report, ...

This report is a structured summary of a short assessment. It is not a psychological evaluation. Use alongside, not in place of, interviews and work samples.

Background

COVER LETTER

I am a senior professional with extensive experience across multiple sectors and I believe I bring exactly what YFS needs at this stage of its journey. I have a strong track record of high-profile roles and I am known for my strategic vision and ability to inspire teams. I am very interested in the CEO position and am confident I can take YFS to the next level.

Role-specific answers

CEO

QUESTION 1

What does excellent performance in the CEO role look like in the first 90 days, and how would you deliver it?

Excellent performance in the first 90 days means establishing my presence and making sure the team understands my vision. I would hold all-hands sessions, meet external stakeholders, and present my strategic vision to the board. By day 90 I would have a clear roadmap that I've communicated widely. People need to know who's in charge and where we're going.

QUESTION 2

Tell us about a time you had to solve an ambiguous problem that is similar to the challenges in this CEO role. What did you do, and what changed because of your work?

I was leading a complex transformation programme at a large organisation and the challenge was that my predecessor had left things in a very difficult state. The culture was poor, the processes were broken, and the team morale was low. I came in and took charge, restructured the team, and began implementing a proper management framework. It took about 18 months but we turned it around significantly. The key was strong leadership and clear direction.

QUESTION 3

Describe the strongest proof of work you would point to for this CEO application, and explain why it matters.

My strongest proof of work is my reputation. I have been headhunted multiple times and have consistently delivered results in challenging environments. I have a wide network across the education and charity sectors and I am known as someone who gets things done. I have also spoken at several conferences and have been recognised for my thought leadership.

QUESTION 4

If you joined YFS in this CEO role next month, what would you stop, start, and improve first?

I would immediately stop any initiatives that are not delivering results. I would start a proper strategic planning process with clear KPIs and accountability. I would improve the communication structures so that everyone is aligned with my vision. Organisations often drift without strong leadership and I would correct that quickly.

QUESTION 5

Describe a project where you had to earn trust across stakeholders with different priorities. How did you do it?

Stakeholder management is really about confidence and presence. When stakeholders see that you know what you're doing and that you're in control, trust comes naturally. I have always found that being confident and articulate in meetings is the most important thing. I tend to take charge of rooms and people respond to that.

QUESTION 6

What trade-offs would you make when speed, quality, and resource constraints collide in this kind of role?

When speed, quality, and resources collide, the answer is strong leadership. Someone has to make the call and be accountable for it. I am comfortable making tough decisions quickly. In my experience, organisations that struggle with these trade-offs lack decisive leadership. I provide that.

QUESTION 7

Tell us about a time you improved a broken process. What was wrong, what changed, and how did you measure the improvement?

I have improved many broken processes over my career. In one organisation the issue was really about accountability — nobody owned anything. I introduced a clear RACI matrix and held people to it. The process improved but honestly the bigger issue was that the previous leadership hadn't held people accountable. Once I fixed the culture, the processes fixed themselves.

QUESTION 8

What parts of this CEO role play to your strengths, and where would you need to learn quickly?

My strengths are vision, leadership presence, and the ability to operate at a high level with boards and senior stakeholders. I am very strong at strategy and at building external profile for an organisation. The area where I would rely on others is operational detail — I see my role as setting direction and letting talented people execute.

QUESTION 9

Describe a moment when you showed unusual ownership or agency without being asked. What happened?

I have numerous examples of going above and beyond. I am naturally someone who sees what needs to be done and does it without being asked. In fact, I find it frustrating when people wait to be told what to do. I believe in taking initiative and I have built that culture in every team I have led.

QUESTION 10

Using this added context, Running the whole organisation, describe how you would approach the most important challenge in this role.

The most important challenge is external visibility and fundraising. YFS needs a CEO who can open doors and bring in significant funding. I have those relationships and that credibility. I would focus heavily on growing the organisation's profile and income.

Standard questions

Q1

Tell us about a time you identified a problem no one else had noticed and took initiative to solve it. What did you do and what happened?

I have spotted many problems that others missed throughout my career. It's part of being a strategic thinker. In one role I identified that the board was receiving information that was too filtered and sanitised. I restructured the reporting process so that the board got more direct information. Some people in the organisation were uncomfortable with this but it was the right thing to do.

Q2

Describe a project or goal you worked on that did not go as planned. How did you respond and what did you learn?

Most projects that go wrong do so because of other people failing to deliver. In one case I was leading a programme that fell behind because a key contractor let us down. I escalated immediately and managed the situation. We recovered but it cost us time and resource. The learning was really about the importance of choosing the right partners.

Q3

What is one skill or area of knowledge you have taught yourself in the past two years? Why did you pursue it and how did you go about it?

I am constantly developing myself. I read widely, attend conferences, and maintain a large network. I think learning is about exposure to ideas and to other high-performing leaders. I recently completed an executive education programme at a business school which reinforced many of my existing approaches.

Q4

Describe a situation where you disagreed with someone more senior than you. How did you handle it and what was the outcome?

I rarely disagree with seniors because I am usually the most senior person in the room.

When I was earlier in my career there were times I thought leaders were making mistakes. I generally found it most effective to work around poor decisions rather than challenge them directly, and to position myself to be promoted to a level where I could make better decisions.

Q5

What is the most ambitious thing you have attempted, regardless of whether it succeeded? What drove you to try it?

The most ambitious thing I have attempted is taking on a CEO role in a very challenging context and turning the organisation around. It was difficult and there were moments of doubt, but I had the resilience and the self-belief to see it through. I think ambition and self-confidence are the foundations of achievement.

Q6

Where do you want to be in five years, and how does this role connect to that path?

In five years I see myself at the helm of a significantly larger and more influential organisation. I want to build YFS into a nationally recognised brand and a destination for top talent. I would want to expand revenue significantly and establish the organisation as a leader in the field.

 Settings

billy@youngfoundersschool.com

\[→ Sign out