Behavioural assessment summary

ROLE-FIT READ

Likely mis-fit

OVERALL CONFIDENCE

Moderate signal — partial convergence

Four behavioural items scored with partial convergence; conscientiousness and honesty-humility reach moderate confidence while learning and interpersonal dimensions have insufficient data to draw firm conclusions.

The candidate's orientation toward structure and predictability sits at odds with a role that requires instinctive comfort with AI tools, automation, and fast-moving ambiguity. When pressed for specifics, responses stayed surface-level, and there's no evidence of a technical or experimental marketing mindset underneath the traditional framing.

This is a summary of observed signal against the hiring frame for this role. It is not a hire/no-hire recommendation — an interview is required to make that call.

PATTERNS AND CONCERNS

Self-report diverges on commitment and follow-through

Candidate agrees they "sometimes leave tasks unfinished when they lose interest" (C-CC1 = 4/5), but their forced-choice responses suggest the opposite. Worth probing with a specific example of a project they did not complete.

Referenced: Consistency check — commitment

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"You mentioned you sometimes leave tasks unfinished when interest fades, but elsewhere your responses paint a picture of someone who consistently follows through. Can you give me a concrete example of a project or task you actually walked away from before it was done, and what led to that decision?"

Role-direction mismatch: traditional marketing frame without AI or automation instinct

The candidate's responses reflect a traditional marketing orientation — focused on authentic connection and human-first approaches — with an explicit preference against technology-heavy methods. The Marketing Engineer role requires an AI-first, builder mindset. This is a role-direction mismatch, not a competence issue.

Referenced: Role-specific questions

SUGGESTED PROBE  Regenerate

"You mentioned that AI is \"interesting\" but didn't finish that thought — this role is built around using AI tools to automate and scale marketing workflows, so I'd like to hear the rest of it: what's your actual take on AI in marketing, and how much have you worked with it beyond scheduling and design tools like Hootsuite and Canva?"

Behavioural responses consistently lack specificity

Across 2 behavioural items, the candidate gave abstract or generic descriptions rather than concrete, specific accounts. Could indicate weak self-reflection, low agency in the situations described, or a preparation issue. Probe with targeted "tell me exactly what you did next" questions.

Referenced: Part 1 — A recent piece of work, Part 5 — Changing your mind

SUGGESTED PROBE  Regenerate

"You mentioned the charity campaign became \"a bit

disorganised for a week or two" after the event was postponed — can you tell me specifically what you personally did during that period to get things back on track, and what the content plan actually looked like once you'd adapted it?"

Stability ranked high for a high-ambiguity role

Candidate ranked stability as a top-1 motivator. This role involves high ambiguity and self-direction. Worth testing whether the candidate has had successful experience in less structured environments.

Referenced: Motivation trade-off ranking

SUGGESTED PROBE Regenerate

"You ranked stability as your top motivator, and this role sits in a pretty ambiguous space where priorities shift and the path forward isn't always clear. What does stability actually look like for you day-to-day, and how have you managed when that wasn't available?"

STRENGTHS

- ✓ In Part 1, the candidate stayed the course through a "disorganised" period after an event postponement, working to rebuild a content plan rather than abandoning the campaign's goals.
- ✓ In Part 5, the candidate followed supervisor feedback on tone despite personal reservations, framing compliance as deliberate choice in "a learning environment" — a grounded, if still developing, openness to external correction.

INTERVIEW FOCUS

1. "You mentioned you sometimes leave tasks unfinished when interest fades, but elsewhere your responses paint a picture of someone who consistently follows through. Can you give me a concrete example of a project or task you actually walked away from before it was done, and what led to that decision?"
2. "You mentioned that AI is 'interesting' but didn't finish that thought — this role is built around using AI tools to automate and scale marketing workflows, so I'd like to hear the rest of it: what's your actual take on AI in marketing, and how much have you worked with it beyond scheduling and design tools like Hootsuite and Canva?"
3. "You mentioned the wrong-date post 'wasn't a big deal in the end' — what would a situation look like where a mistake you made genuinely was a big deal, and how did you handle that one?"

Ranked by signal priority — high-severity flags first, then downgraded dimensions.

Background

COVER LETTER

I have a strong background in marketing and communications and have worked on several brand campaigns during my studies. I am passionate about storytelling and have experience running social media accounts and writing copy. I enjoy working with people and am a strong communicator. I am looking for a role where I can develop my marketing career.

Role-specific answers

Marketing Engineer

QUESTION 1

Describe a creative project you have worked on — personal, academic, or professional — that you are genuinely proud of. What made it stand out and what did you build or create?

I managed the social media presence for a local charity during my placement year. I ran their Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter accounts, created a content calendar, and grew their following. I wrote all the copy and sourced images. The following grew by about 15% over the year and engagement improved. I am proud of the consistency I maintained and the relationships I built with the charity's audience.

QUESTION 2

Tell us about an AI tool, automation, or script you have built or used in your own life or studies. What did it do, how did you build or set it up, and what problem did it solve?

I have used Canva to design social media graphics and Hootsuite to schedule posts. These tools have been very useful for keeping content organised and professional-looking. I think the best tools are the ones that are intuitive and don't require too much technical knowledge to use effectively.

QUESTION 3

How do you think AI is changing marketing over the next two to three years? How are you personally preparing for that shift, and what have you already experimented with?

I think AI is an interesting topic in marketing but I believe that authentic human connection will always be what makes marketing truly work. Tools can help with efficiency but the creative and strategic thinking still needs to come from people. I prefer to focus on understanding the audience and crafting genuine messages rather than relying on technology.

QUESTION 4

If you had to launch a marketing campaign for YFS with a £500 budget, one week of your own time, and no team, what would you actually do? Be as specific as possible.

With £500 I would focus on a local event or partnership that brings people together. Marketing is most effective when it creates real-world connection. I would use the budget to host a small event featuring YFS students and invite journalists and local community figures. Word of mouth and genuine relationships are more powerful than digital campaigns.

QUESTION 5

Describe something you have taught yourself outside of school or university in the last two years. Why did you pursue it, how did you go about it, and what did you produce or achieve as a result?

I completed a CIM Foundation Certificate in Marketing last year through evening classes. It gave me a strong grounding in marketing theory and strategy. I find formal learning works well for me as it provides structure and recognised qualifications.

Standard questions

Q1

Tell us about a time you identified a problem no one else had noticed and took initiative to solve it. What did you do and what happened?

I noticed that the charity I was on placement with did not have consistent brand guidelines being followed across different teams. I drafted a simple brand guide document and shared it with the relevant teams. Some people found it useful.

Describe a project or goal you worked on that did not go as planned. How did you respond and what did you learn?

A campaign I worked on for a university project didn't perform as well as we hoped in terms of the response rate. The messaging may not have been pitched quite right for the target audience. We should have done more research upfront.

What is one skill or area of knowledge you have taught yourself in the past two years? Why did you pursue it and how did you go about it?

I have been working through a copywriting course online. Good copywriting is something I think is fundamental to marketing and I want to continue developing my skills in this area.

Describe a situation where you disagreed with someone more senior than you. How did you handle it and what was the outcome?

I disagreed with a module leader about the grading criteria for an assignment. I spoke to them after the session and explained my concern. They listened politely but didn't change the grade. I accepted this and moved on.

What is the most ambitious thing you have attempted, regardless of whether it succeeded? What drove you to try it?

The most ambitious thing I have attempted is pursuing a career in marketing when many people told me it was too competitive. I have persisted and am continuing to develop my skills.

Where do you want to be in five years, and how does this role connect to that path?

In five years I would like to be a marketing manager for a brand or organisation I believe in. I want to work on campaigns that make a real difference. This role is a stepping stone to building that experience.
